

I decided against making a job portfolio because I am looking for a paralegal position. With my lack of experience in the field before getting other job experience, there is little for me to include in a job portfolio. Instead, I chose to make a silly fun website about Taylor Swift. I actually may decide to keep this website after the class has concluded because my friends like it so I am excited to continue to upkeep and add more features. So far my website includes links to the official Taylor Swift shop, updates on the current Eras Tour such as the most recent tour stops, and the most recent surprise songs because there is a section of the concert where she will play a few of her songs not on the setlist, what outfit combinations she's worn so far because another part of the concert is she has a set amount of outfits for each section and you can play a game called Mastermind and guess what outfits you think she will wear that specific concert but one section she doesn't wear the same outfit combination twice so you have to keep up. I have still included my original article on each cat breed as a Taylor Swift song but it is no longer the focal point of my website. I am not including any CSS stylesheet because, unpopular opinion, I find it easier to put it all together on the same sheet. I would maybe do that if I was more experienced with what each thing does but with my current experience I am still making little mistakes and like it all right in front of me so I can adjust each thing to find the problem.
